¹ The parties should identify the general date range (e.g., 1999–2017) of documents or data produced for each applicable category and need not identify specific date ranges of every document in a given category. For custodial files, the date range reflects documents produced to date. Substantial additional productions are forthcoming.

² Substantial completion does not include production resulting from privilege review, which is being conducted pursuant to the schedule set forth in CMO 1. Additional documents may be produced as a result of such review.

⁴ Custodians listed here are those for whom deposition dates have been requested and no objection has been raised.
